MSU Sports Recruiting

Michigan State University (MSU) is one of the largest and most well known colleges in the United States. For project 4 we will be focusing on the two biggest sports at MSU; football and men's basketball(M). People who follow sports closely need to understand that the NCAA is a business. Throughout rules and regulations students cannot get paid and with college sports generating billions of dollars every year, the NCAA needs to do more to give back to the student athletes. Money that MSU basketball(M) and football make can be pushed into school funding and go to things not related to anything with sports. When it comes to MSU it wouldn't be a surprise if sports come to mind when you think of this University. However, every year MSU sports are disrespected on sports channels and in the media. MSU sports are looked past over and over again. After countless final four appearance for basketball and being tied for the fifth most out of any college in the nation why do we always get scammed. When it comes to recruiting MSU always seems to get bottom picks and comes out with a poor overall ratings. The recruiting period begins in September and ends the first week in May. After about 8 months of recruiting why does MSU basketball always come out with 3 star recruits.

College sports are a business, they are the step just before becoming a professional. College sports are in the eyes of the media all year round and it is not just the players who receive all of the focus. College coaches at MSU are here to win. Tom Izzo (Third highest paid coach in college basketball) makes $4.15 million a year and Mark Dantonio (18th highest paid coach in college football) makes $4.39 million a year. If they are not doing their job; by not winning and bringing high ranking recruits they don't deserve to be here and should be fired. They have a job to do, and the Universities who hire these coaches cannot be afraid of letting them go. These coaching get paid millions of dollars.
